

A tropical resort scene featuring a thatched-roof pavilion over a swimming pool, with a woman carrying a basket on her head in the foreground. The pavilion has a steeply pitched roof made of dried palm fronds and is supported by wooden posts. The pool is a vibrant turquoise color, reflecting the surrounding greenery. In the foreground, a woman in a pink and purple patterned sarong and a matching top is walking on a grassy area, carrying a woven basket on her head. The background is filled with lush tropical vegetation, including palm trees and dense foliage, under a clear blue sky.

AMANDARI

Inspired by a traditional village, Amandari is framed by jungle and rice terraces in Bali's cultural heartland. Alang-alang-thatched houses - some with pools, all with private tropical gardens - cosset guests under bamboo ceilings, their suites elegantly decorated with teak and coconut-wood. The grounds are both sacred and essential to local families: children attend dance classes here, and religious processions pass through regularly, leading down the steps that spill below Amandari to a 7th-century stone tiger - a motif repeated throughout the property. Follow the road out of the village to hike or bike the emerald-green landscape; or head further afield for artisan villages, hidden temples, and the palaces and boutiques of Ubud.

Location

- Amandari lies in the village of Kedewatan, 15 minutes drive from Ubud
- Hidden on a hillside overlooking rice terraces and the wilderness of the Ayung Valley

Getting There

- Around a one and a half hour drive north of Denpasar's Ngurah Rai International airport
- Ngurah Rai is served by carriers including Singapore Airlines, Garuda and Jetstar

Accommodation

Surrounded by traditional paras-stone walls, each of the freestanding suites is accessed by a traditional Balinese stone gateway, leading to private courtyard gardens and sumptuous interiors.
